

Title: Land Surveyor
Location: Hertfordshire

About the role:

We are looking for a Land Surveyor to join a growing consultancy and provide ongoing technical surveying support to a range of clients in the UK with ongoing work available and excellent development opportunities for the right individual.

As a Land Surveyor, you will be working on a range of residential, commercial and education projects and should be able to demonstrate experience in completing surveys on projects in these sectors. There is a great variety of work, with additional projects outside of their core offerings, and the opportunity is there for an individual to be involved in the ownership and responsibility of taking projects from start to finish. The ethos of the business is very much to provide a balance of both field and office work, and there is a real sense of project ownership at the core of the business mentality.

Within the role of a Land Surveyor, it will be essential for the chosen individual to complete surveys in line with the client's requirements, and your input and contribution to the team are viewed as essential in the continued development of the business. The business strives to ensure their surveyors are well-rounded in all aspects of the business with the opportunity to work on a range of projects, whilst also fully supporting and encouraging professional development and progression, and providing the autonomy for someone to choose to specialise in a specific project/sector type should they wish.

In the role, you will be completing topographical surveys, measured building surveys, boundary surveys and river surveys. You will be responsible for 3D laser scanning, engineering setting out and dimensional control, photogrammetry, and underground utility detection and mapping. You will so be responsible for the office processing of survey data and the CAD drawing of your surveys so you must be well-versed in modern surveying equipment and software with a strong eye for detail.

About you:

Candidates should have a minimum of 2 years experience working for UK-based consultancies, and a background working on similar projects is desired in order to ensure a close match to the existing and upcoming workload.

In addition to having a confident, commercial and professional outlook you should have:

- Clean driving licence and own vehicle
- Minimum of 2 years UK based experience
- Strong analytical, communication and technical skills
- Excellent communication skills in both written and spoken English
- Experience using modern surveying equipment and software
- Excellent attention to detail

Software required:

- AutoCAD
- Microsoft Office suite

About the business:

The company are an established consultancy who have been working on UK-based projects for the last 50 years and has built up a reputation for working on projects to a high level of detail and client satisfaction. This is an excellent opportunity to join their Hertfordshire office where their team continues to go from strength to strength and provide excellent construction engineering services to their UK-based clients.

With a portfolio that includes residential, commercial and education projects of varying value and complexity, they have a wealth of experience and some exciting future projects that have led to them requiring another skilled and eager individual to join them as part of their business development.

Benefits package:

- Company pension
- 25 days holiday + Bank Holidays
- Death in service benefit
- Long service awards
- Flexible working
- Cycle to work scheme
- Interest-free loan for annual travel season ticket
- Yearly flu vaccine
- Free eye tests and a contribution towards glasses
